

LAST CALL

Strong winds that uproot trees, unexpected and aggressive hailstorms, torrential rain are becoming part of our daily lives. In the past these phenomena were rare while today they are more and more frequent.

It's certainly nice to wear a light jacket in February and enjoy this spring warmth during a walk in the park, or go out without an umbrella for 2 months. However it is absolutely unnatural. Moreover, when water finally arrives, it has a so destructive and violent strength that it destroys everything: it ruins crops, it chops down trees (as you can see in the picture), it takes off rooftops in a few minutes.

Nature is alerting us and we MUST listen to IT!
